"Maybe You"

One fine day he walked through the wood
He talked to himself
And it killed his soul
Everything 'round him seemed to live and grow
Though the sun shined warm
He felt cold

"And maybe you,"
She's always on his mind
The words she used
Are rubbing salt in his wounds
"And maybe you,"
She's always on his mind
The words she used:

"And maybe you,"

As he touched a tree, white birds flew away
His mind flashed back to Yesterday
Sitting on a stump, waiting for a while
Then he understood
And he smiled

Suddenly
Someone or just something
Stops being
Suddenly
