maybe i should drop you at you door and leave tonight and vanish up the shore anywhere but here it's three o'clock i'm driving in your car your screaming at the window at the stars please don't drive me home blame us cause we are who we are hate us cause you'll never get that far and who'd suppose that you would go i've already learned enough to know that...

tell me all the places we can go you count the headlights passing on the road a long long time ago

i've already learned enough to know that...

here here we are foreign to their world straight and composed your sermons i can do without i've finally found that everybody loves to love you when you're far away

could it be we've done something wrong i'll make it back to your place before dawn
please don't take me home

and who'd suppose that you would go
i've already learned enough to know that...
