From an ordinary house, in an ordinary road
From an ordinary town, there came an ordinary girl
A face that looked surprised, a book of dog-eared lines

She never made a sound, never said a word
Nothing was ever seen, nothing was ever heard
In an ordinary town and an ordinary girl

She's feeling outrageous, so daft and courageous
She's laughing, flirtatious, we're falling unconscious
She's selfish and needy, she's wanton and greedy
She's mugging her lovers, she's bleeding the [Incomprehensible]

In an ordinary house, in an ordinary town
Upon an ordinary street, nothing was ever found
By an ordinary girl who never made a sound

She's up in the attic, she's bristling with static
Her beauty's vampiric, so solemn and stoic
She's wanton, she's needy, she's selfish and greedy
She's mugging her lovers, she's bleeding the [Incomprehensible]

The ones she's been kissing are strangely, gone missing
The day when you wed her, you saw me unteather
This feeling, no, never, they all went together
They all went together with an ordinary girl
