Between the worlds that I don't say,
Beneath your sacred nights and days,
Through the gales of life and laughter,
When you can't you see what you're after,
The evenings and the afternoons
Are measured up in coffee spoons
Between the sunshine and the rain
I thought I'd have something more to say

It's a new life for the neighbors,
With their name in all the papers, don't you know?
Don't you know?

Should we go out for a laugh,
I have a faded photograph,
Of one day in some September
That we had and can't remember
Should your god refute the facts
And science not take up the slack,
You could get your money back
For all you want and all you have

It's a new day for the neighbors,
With their name in all the papers, don't you know?
Don't you know?
It's a new day for the neighbors,
With their name in all the papers, don't you know?
Don't you know?

I'm looking for some better day
I'm looking for some better way
Through the gales of life and laughter,
When you don't know what you're after,
Will drag me to the kitchen sink
My whole day is on the brink,
From here I can still see the moon,
I think I'll move there someday soon.

It's a new day for the neighbors,
With their name in all the papers, don't you know?
Don't you know?

It's a new life for the neighbors,
With their name in all the papers, don't you know?
Don't you know?
