The sun shone through the window
As I lay down on your carpet
Staring at the speakers
Pretending to be tortured
And I never moved a muscle
No, I never moved a muscle

The sunlight turned to shadows
And the minutes turned to hours
Somebody turned the lights on
There was conversation, laughter
And you know just what I'm after
You know just what I'm after

You will look at me
And your curiosity
Is gonna get the better of you
Will get the better of you

She's standing next to me now
She's in the air I breathe
She says, "I'm marrying a rich man
But he still thinks I'm a virgin"
So I need a little action, I need a little fun
I need a good Samaritan, good Samaritan
Good Samaritan, good Samaritan"

We raged around our cages
Until all the doors lay open
Then we fell upon each other
In the fury and the frenzy
And we fought like Gods of Thunder
And we played like fives 'n under

And the only screams that mattered
Turn to whispers in my ear
You're my good Samaritan, you're my good Samaritan
You're my good Samaritan, you're my good Samaritan

Walking down the street
They make such a lovely couple
And she freezes when she sees me

But she don't have to worry
'Cos I needed something deeper
I needed something longer

But she said, "People who are weaker
Need people who are stronger"
And I don't know what possessed you
Was I just a one night stand?
And not your good Samaritan, good Samaritan
Good Samaritan, good Samaritan
