When I was just sixteen, I stood waiting for a dream
At Barker Street bus station every night When I tried to get it on, she just looked at me with scorn
My courage turned to dust and I took flight

For those looks they seemed to say You ain't nuthin', go away You're just a face in the crowd so I went home and I vowed I'm gonna be somebody, someday

Her name was Irene Wilde, oh such beauty for a child
When she started dating boys, I nearly died For I could not barely stand, seeing someone hold her hand
I felt I had to crawl away and hide

In my mother's living room I composed so many tunes
All the same, just a frame for her name
And just to say
Gonna be somebody, someday

Wild as your name, I soon left that country town I been around, seen some fame, seen some ups and seen some downs
Smile through your shock as you hear your name aloud
It's that face in the crowd didn't dig it much too proud

And when I was just sixteen, I stood waiting for a dream
A Barker Street bus station non affair
At the time it seemed so sad, but it did not turn out bad
If you hadn't messed me up, I'd still be there

And I think most folks agree, a little put-down makes them see
They ain't no chain, just a link
And that's why you made me think Gonna be somebody, be somebody, be somebody, someday
