Usher in the rally cries
Revolution's here again
The emperor's bonds are broken
And free he shall remain

Escape though narrow, was demand
While his reign remained in view
This fight for France, till bitter end
He must see it through

Coalition forms of many lands
Against Napoleon, west to east
Dogs of war will take to arms
And soon will be unleashed

Prussian, Russian and Austrian
All follow British lead
At allies' helm is Wellington
Who must make his Foe concede

Foreshadowed man of destiny
Soon you will be force to see
Nations aligning against you
Marking the time your reign is through
And you will see your hundred days come to an end

Foreshadowed man of destiny
Soon you will be forced to see
Nations aligning against you
Marking the time your reign is through
It lies before you, fate shall befall you

Quickly, the allies gather force
Near the Franco-Belgian line
While 124,000 French
March there in double time

As the battle begins
Napoleon springs his audacious plan
He'll attack them on two fronts
Splitting up his warring Band

As the Prussians sound retreat
Behind they leave 12,000 slain
Most of their force is still in tact
And will live to fight again

Wellington
Who felt the loss of 5,000 men
Would feel more under cannon fire
Bombardment from the French

Foreshadowed man of destiny
Soon you will be forced to see
Nations aligning against you
Marking the time your reign is through
And you will see your hundred days come to an end

Foreshadowed man of destiny
Soon you will be forced to see
Nations aligning against you
Marking the time your reign is through
It lies before you, fate shall befall you

Of all the wars I have waged
To propel my nations might
For this I'll be remembered
From now 'till the end of time

If to the victor go the spoils
I may die an impoverished man
For in the end, irony
Has dealt the cruelest hand

The French Force was swift and sure
But their attack would be repelled
And though their center battered
The Anglo-Dutch line would be held

As fate or skill would have it
An army moves in from the east
The Prussians who slipped out of his hands
Would soon spell his defeat

The French lines now are broken
And being open to attack
The Emperor has no choice
And the Old Guard pulls him back

There were 45,000 wounded or dead
When the fight was finally through
On a three square mile battlefield
At a town named Waterloo

Foreshadowed man of destiny
Soon you will be force to see
Nations aligning against you
Marking the time your reign is through
And you will see your hundred days come to an end

Foreshadowed man of destiny
Soon you will be forced to see
Nations aligning against you
Marking the time your reign is through
It lies before you, fate shall befall you
