You could break me by the bones
Until you break me inside
You could drag me from my home
And lay me down by the riverside

Where there was lie in your eyes
Now we read by the night
And still nothing's moved
Even denying what's true

You might have all the facts
But the truth is truth
No matter how you act
If it takes you, it takes you
Takes you home
And if it takes you, takes you
Takes you home
And if it tries to take you
It takes you home home
And if it takes you, it takes you
Takes you home

You could take me on my own
Until you break me inside
What's been divided by walls
Is now divided by night

In my sleeping bag
The metaphor of darkness, it's a light
But it's all up to you
Even denying what's true

You might claim to have the facts
But the truth is truth
No matter how you act
If it takes you, it takes you
Takes you home
And if it takes you, it takes you
Takes you home
And if it tries to take you
Takes you home

And if it takes you, it takes you
Takes you home
