You could break me by the bones
until you break me inside
You could drag me from my home and lay me down by the riverside

Where there was lie in your eyes now we read by the night And still nothing's moved even denying what's true

You might have all the facts
but the truth is truth
no matter how you act
If it takes you, it takes you
takes you home
And if it takes you, takes you
takes you home
And if it tries to take you it takes you home home
And if it takes you, it takes you
takes you home

You could take me on my own

until you break me inside
What's been divided by walls is now divided by night

In my sleeping bag
the metaphor of darkness, it's a light But it's all up to you

You might claim to have the facts
but the truth is truth
takes you home
And if it takes you, it takes you
takes you home
takes you home

And if it takes you, it takes you
takes you home
