Begging me, to offer an excuse to stay
I should speak for some reason I won't Dead-eye stare, is all you'll ever get out of me
I should care, but somehow I don't, no I don't

I know my last chance is wasted
So why the hell won't you leave?

I'm tired of playing games going or staying the house always wins
Everytime I'm your pawn just stringing me along and it's your move again
But this time the cards are in my hands
And I'm not buying in to let you trick me again

I know my last chance is wasted
So why the hell won't you leave?

I've so much to say yet no words are forming at this time
Why is it so hard telling you goodbye
Dead-eye stare, your falling tears have no effect on me
I should care, no not this time

I'm tired of playing games going or staying the house
always wins
Everytime I'm your pawn just stringing me along and
it's your move again
But this time the cards are in my hands
And I'm not buying in to let you trick me again

I know my last chance is wasted
So why the hell won't you leave?

There it is, all my cards are layed out on the table
I called your bluff and now it's time to go Dead-eye stare, a shocked look I see in your eyes You'd never have guessed well now you know
Now you know

The harder you try, the less I sympathize; and I've heard it all before You're giving that look, that worked once so well, but you face just leaves me cold

I know my last chance is wasted
So why the hell won't you leave?

One more chance, for me to change my mind you're waiting
On second thought I think I might Dead-eye stare, I'll get through this if I keep my mouth shut
I should care, no not tonight

Dead-eye stare, waiting for me to change my mind Dead-eye stare, no not this time
I know my last chance is wasted
Why the hell won't you leave?
