Unexpected cold
My skin and clothes soak
Submerged in fluid
Terrible panic I begin to choke
Garments cling heavily
The weight tires my weary frame
Shrieking, crying
No one hears my dying
Drowning, dreaming
Silently screaming
Thrashing I go down

Compressed body drowns
Suffocation, desperation
Dismally I cannot surface to breath
Intimate visions
Manically rush before my eyes
Can this surface be the climax
Of life before it dies
Struggling, failing
Help me I'm drowning
