fell asleep in the van with a crick in my neck and a yearning in my brain making myself homesick looking at your photograph i do the best that i can to keep myself in check but it's easy to complain when our home sits on the binding of the u.s. page of the road atlas side 26 coast to go and i'm holding my breath squeasin' my spider-man pillow to death i can see your eyes when i hold mine closed so tightly absence will make your heart grow fonder all of my dreams will come true and if your heart starts to falter i will tell you what i'll do...

hold my breath all night
clench my fists so tight wish with all my might
that i'll never fear
grit my teeth too hard
travel very far
wish upon the stars
that i'll never...

i never feared you with thoughts of you near me i camped out by the phone putting scratches in my notebook and waiting up until dawn humming this song back and forth over and over again

on the binding of the u.s. page of the road atlas

i sleep as much as i can and hold my heart in my hand it's as much as i can stand my weakness comes out once again
