

In Pieces "A Miracle"

I've always had such a negative point of view.
I've always thought the worst of you. And I am still there.

When the oceans recede I just laughed; if I can't have it
no one can, I guess.
But I am a mountain no more.
Don't fool yourself.

I want to be normal again I'm ready to come in.
But I am still there.
1,000 years of solitude have had a strange effect on
my personality.
I want to be a person again.

A clean start, a clean slate, a fresh, start, a clean conscience.

But if you get to be Christ, then I get to be Longinus with this spear in my hand, screaming out loud to straighten the fuck up.

Maybe life exists, maybe not.
