"Clues to You" is an Amy Ray song from "Color Me Grey."

I honestly have no clue what the first half of the first line is.

Any clues, anyone?

Clues to You.

(They're on) those days when the sun barely touches the sky

Your eyes are so heavy with the morning

And there you lie on the horizon of my mind

Streams flow through the consciousness of time

And I follow every movement for a clue to you

You cover my eyes with your deepness

You wrap my soul in the beauty of it all

You take me away from my incompleteness

Lead me all the way, or not at all

And time's too precious here

I can't wait for clues to you

I can't wait for clues to you

Don't wake me if I'm dreaming, no, no, no, this is my reality

If I touch you now, tell me, will you blow away?

Please don't move now, until you set me free - set me free

I can't wait for clues to you

Name the time and I'll be your place

Remove my eyes from this deathly haze

Now, I've been living shades of blue and grey

Don't you know I'm ready for a brighter phase

And time's too precious here

I can't wait for clues to you

I can't wait for clues to you

Won't you catch me if I fall too fast

Don't let me fly too high

You've released me from my earthly grasp

And now you've got me in your skies - in your skies

I can't wait for clues to you

Now I don't want to wait anymore for clues

Let it rain

Let it wash on down

I can't wait for clues to you

I don't want to wait anymore for clues.
