

Indigo Girls "Daddy's All Gone"

Visit "Daddy's All Gone" on MotoLyrics.com

"Daddy's All Gone" is a James Taylor song. A live IG version appears on "Shades of Indigo." If you ask me, that song alone is worth the price of the disc. Em really shines, I think. Especially on the word "train" that goes on forever... what SOUL... ooooh. And her solo guitar arrangement is cool, too.

Daddy's All Gone.
Don't have much to say
Thought I'd call you up anyway
Just to try and tell you the way
That I feel today -
Oh, I miss you baby.
Sure, I'm on the road
I don't need to say much more
Just the same old well known stranger
That I was before -
Seems like yesterday.
Daddy's all gone
He's just a halfway home
He's holding on to the telephone
Singing "Please -

Don't let the show go on."
There's a bus every other hour
Even a midnight train
But that don't leave me the power
To see your face again -
It's not that simple anymore.
You see, there's a room full of smiling faces
And there's a man standing by the door
When he says it's time we take our places
And get down on the floor -
Oh, I'd like to kill him, baby.
Daddy's all gone
He's just a halfway home
He's hanging on to the microphone
Singing "Please -
Don't let the show go on."

