The days will crash by and they'll trample your roses
But the path where you walked will soon blossom again
On the day when we find we've become our own jailers
And we reach for the key that has always been sleeping within

So tomorrow's child, come and tell me you've never seen this before Tomorrow's child, come and show me how I could be So much more Than what I am now

I don't wanna belong in this landscape of fences
In this world that's rejected the gifts that the future can bring A world where wings are clipped by the language on billboards
And car alarms teach all the newborn birds to sing

So tomorrow's child, come and tell me you've never
seen this before Tomorrow's child, come and show me how this could be more

And I will take off my skin and go flying But I'm afraid if I fall I could fall
So give me the courage to be an invisible
But I'm frightened of losing it all
