Let's move on, hastily approach if you dare
When will you break away from your own rule?
Push and shove the hardest that you can
I am not the nightmare that chooses you

Bring your worst to the table
Bring your worst to the table

I found your memories on the floor
As blank as they are your choices
I saw a man on the top of his world
Crushed by the fear of his maker

And it's coming down to what means the most to you
And it feels so right when everything's in your hands
And it's coming down to what means the most to you
And it feels so right when everything's in your hands

I will restore your heart's desires
And when the sun goes down
You'll live to see another day

Bring your worst to the table
Bring your worst to the table

To walk around and not pick you up
Would be a shame at least I know
And find a gun at the end of your heartache
We'll fight to hold back the tears

And it's coming down to what means the most to you
And it feels so right when everything's in your hands
And it's coming down to what means the most to you
And it feels so right when everything's in your hands

I will restore your heart's desires
And when the sun goes down
You'll live to see another day

Oh my, just sit and stare
This time you leave the talking to someone else
You must be searching for someone else

You must be searching for something else
You must be searching for someone else
You must be searching for something else, else

I will restore your heart's desires
And when the sun goes down
You'll live to see another day
