Sometimes the light from the TV lies.
Clock on the wall, and it serves to remind;
That it's over.

Feel estranged, like a bastion barring yesterday.
In this life I'm afraid of what I've seen.
I can breathe face-down,
But I cannot be.

The time you took won't erase,
When you find me.
I've got a friend who helps me stay out of touch.
When I fall down you shouldn't expect too much.

Because it's over,
I feel so cold.
I need this one thing,
Just to make me whole.

Now you've looked,
Did you like just what you've seen?

Let me go,
Let me go so far away.

I'd find the wreckage of myself washed ashore,
If I set my soul on fire or let the trigger fly,
'Cause I don't know you anymore.
