Before I was undiscovered
When I was invincible
Nobody could kill the silence
And probably no one will again

The future was unrelated
Alternatives all pursued
The lives that got separated
When others were split in two

And I don't remember now where I'm,
Supposed to be
I slide between the waves,
And ride the frequency alone

They might have agreed to listen
If I didn't lose control
But I was as lost as they were
As still as a heart grown cold

And I don't recall how I became
The one I used to be
I heard the strings of life begin
Within the frequency that night
I walked through the walls

Hold on tight, lives are going to change
The kind of his kingdom is surely falling out of range

Stay a while in the present tense
All in good time,
You'll find your inner sense

Now as a final fire climbs into the Single spire
High above the wireless world it hovers
So as the brightest child sinks into the safest arms
Tight against the bomb that hangs above us

I could of stayed if you were mine
If time remained the reasons would of rhymed
But I don't remember now where I should be

Find me where you don't believe me
There's a warning in between the memories
Can you hear me through the whitest noise?

I slide between the waves,
And ride the frequency

Light and sound
Conceal me
They shield me
From danger signs
Make me understand it
How can I quit these power lines.
