She was a hit at seventeen four years on and she's waitressing and she wants to know what ever happened to the boy with the broken heart

She had a house out in Echo Park I called her up as the day grew dark and we talked about our favorite pictures and on the change in the weather And she said my how I have changed
She asked me if she looked different

She laughed passing it off on the turn of the century

She said her boyfriend was never home was up in San Francisco with his trombone And she said she didn't date musicians as she fixed us drinks in the kitchen

Then she showed me her favorite thing
A wooden box with her mothers' ring And she said this wasn't something that she showed just anyone And she said my how I have change
She asked me if she looked different

She laughed passing it off on the turn of the century
