(Tony Colman/Chriss Goss)

I'm going home, don't want to play
You're all much older than me
And I'm too young to stay
Been up too long, it's getting dark
You were supposed to look after me
Instead, you left me on my own
Looking for my father
Looking for my mother
But then I realise
I'm twenty-five years old
I'll take you home, put you to bed

You're so much younger than me
Rest your little head
We've been too far
We learned too much
We sailed the seven seas today
And felt the magic touch
I'm looking in the mirror, I feel important and wise
But then I realise,
I'm only five years old
