do you think i really care about how you see me? as soon as i turn around be careful what you say. when you leave it's the same, no one's your friend. "try and understand it's nothing personal, just how it is" the social scale is slowly climbed. making friends by butting in and talking shit just leads the way for you to lose them the same way. "hey did you hear?" is the starting point for your good time. well here's one for all of you. did you hear about the time that no one gave a shit about what you think? whose life should we pick apart today? probably mine.
