

Caedmon's Call "Share In The Blame"

Visit "Share In The Blame" on MotoLyrics.com

Don't blame the bullet for the wars you have sown
And don't blame the winter when you've forgotten your coat
When you make the same deals for a hundred years
You wanna make a change You gotta hold up the mirror now and share in the blame

Don't blame your brother for the color of his skin Don't blame your neighbor for the house he lives in
From the same cloth, we are all made of, we are just the same
You gotta hold up the mirror now and share in the
blame

Like a coming of age, I am learning how to say
All the failures I'm dragging behind
And I find freedom to speak, freedom to release
Oh tonight, I wanna make peace with you

And don't blame the writer for the doubts in your head Don't blame the preacher for the lovers in your bed
When you find out that the world is round, everything is rearranged
You gotta hold up the mirror now and share in the
blame

Like a coming of age, I am learning how to say
All the failures I'm dragging behind
And I find freedom to speak, freedom to release
Oh tonight, I wanna make peace with you

But don't blame the president, no, don't blame the king And don't blame your history for what might have been
We will be free where the grass is green and the lion is tame

If we just hold up the mirror now and share in the
blame
If we just hold up the mirror now, share in the blame
