T'was the dawn of the day...
And capitalism... Was about to die.
T'was the dawn... of a new age.
And the Lotus bloomed again, and from it's midst...
A utopia came, that was not the same
As those before
And to come again
But them and we

We cannot see
This utopia, with eyes so desecrated
And on the left wing of justice we fly
To a utopia we shall not pass by
And with faces of pure elation
Should we not hold commiseration?
For in our hearts we know we must fight.
