If I Should Lose You
By James IntVeld

At times when I think of life without you
I don't know where I'd stand
To face life's lonely burdens
Without your guiding hands.

I see myself, and can't stop wondering,
If I would survive.
Without the love you've givin',
That's keeping me alive.

'Cause If I should lose you,
where would I be.
All my tomorrows,
would mean nothing to me.
Like falling from heaven,
on a broken wing.
'Cause If I should lose you,
I'd lose everything.

There's never been,
someone like you
To ever come my way
And hold me close, and gentle,
When the pain's too much to take

I've never known a love so true,
Such beauty from within.
It makes me realize everyday,
How lucky that I am.

'Cause If I should lose you,
where would I be.
All my tomorrows,
would mean nothing to me.
Like falling from heaven,
on a broken wing.
'Cause If I should lose you,
I'd lose everything.

Music:

You let me be the man I am,
By standing at my side.
And tell me that I never,
Need a place to hide.

I've learned to love be what you do,
You're truly my best friend.
And just to know you want me,
Makes me live again.

'Cause If I should lose you,
where would I be.
All my tomorrows,
would mean nothing to me.
Like falling from heaven,
on a broken wing.
'Cause If I should lose you,
I'd lose everything.
If I should lose you,
I'd lose everything.
