Slow down You really ought to taste this life The one you nearly wasted on you Today

Well, what would you say? My thoughts don't cost that much So how much would you save By walking away?

I know that you've been blessed But, you look like you've been laid to rest What if your next wish takes your last breath away?

Well, what would you say? My thoughts don't cost that much So how much would you save By walking away? It won't take much if I set you up I'll set you up And you won't save that much By walking away

Slow down You really ought to taste this life The one you nearly wasted on you
