The World Alone

You lost your sensitivity
It's all you had to give to me now
Slowly you're ripping me apart
Right from the start you've made
Your mark and you're through

And I feel you, each time I lie beside you
Frustration, sets forth intimidation and

I can't walk the world alone
Why can't life be set in stone
These feelings are falling
But somehow I want them inside me

A fake smile still feels real to me
I seek the truth in all the things that you do
I can sleep for hours but dream for days
All that I give you just to hear your praise

And I feel you, each time I lie beside you
Frustration, sets forth intimidation and

I can't walk the world alone
Why can't life be set in stone
These feelings are falling
But somehow I want them inside me
