You don't need to tell me
'Cause I already know
There's people living in the streets with nowhere left to go
Holding signs of liberation, the walls are caving in You kick them down but they get right back up again
You've got to be able to survive on your own
Riches turn to rags, fat into skin and bones
You see how they've been livin'
You're out without a home

And nobody likes it when they feel alone
When they feel alone
Basking in the sunlight
Dying in the rain
You've been kicked down so many times you can't get up again
You live your life in squalor, you're at the end of your rope
You're trying to survive but there really is no hope
You don't need to tell me because I already know
