When the fists of winter fly, driving bones into the snow Blackened frostbitten nights, vodka running dry The statues cloaked in white and migrants from museums
Losing all the feeling now that sunrise is outlawed

Strangers plant themselves down in the cold hard ground Later when the harvest thaws snow drops will be in bloom

Crossed out on city maps, Prospekt Mira reveals Shadows drinking antifreeze 'neath the underpass Ordered once a Gulag's march, now cities send the call Falling from the rooftops fast and frozen against the wall

Where strangers plant themselves, dead souls of the underground
When February thaws snow drops will be in bloom again
Bloom again, bloom again, bloom again, bloom again
Red blooms, red blooms
