You'll think of this when summer fades Flowers in your hair, smile on your face Kisses and hugs and wishing wells
And the laughing, and the cheering, and the wedding bells

Time will take it's toll, beware
But I will never cease to care
I crossed many mountains getting here
To see that ring on your hand, my dear

And as we look inside our hearts tonight
You know we'll find it's true There's something old, something new, something borrowed and blue There's something old, something new, borrowed and blue
In Paul's letter to the Corinthians
He speaks of the blessings loving lends
And though true love may not seek it's own You know I'll seek you should you wander too far from home

And as we look inside our hearts tonight, you know we'll find it's true
There's something old, something new, something
borrowed and blue

Borrowed and blue . . .
Borrowed and blue . . .
