

Jars Of Clay "Faith Enough"

The ice is thin enough for walkin'
Rope is worn enough to climb
Throat is dry enough for talkin'
World is crumblin' but I know why
World is crumblin' but I know why

Storm is wild enough for sailing
Bridge is weak enough to cross
This body frail enough for fighting
I'm home enough to know I'm lost
Home enough to know I'm lost

It's just enough to be strong
In the broken places, in the broken places
It's just enough to be strong
Should the world rely on faith tonight?

The land unfit enough for planting
Barren enough to conceive
Poor enough to gain the treasure
Enough a cynic to believe
Enough a cynic to believe

It's just enough to be strong
In the broken places, in the broken places
It's just enough to be strong
Should the world rely on faith tonight?

Confused enough to know direction
The sun eclipsed enough to shine
Be still enough to finally tremble
And see enough to know I'm blind
And see enough to know I'm blind

It's just enough to be strong
In the broken places, in the broken places
It's just enough to be strong
Should the world rely on faith tonight?

It's just enough to be strong
In the broken places, in the broken places
It's just enough to be strong

Should the world rely on faith tonight?

Should the world rely on faith tonight?

Should the world rely on faith tonight?

Tonight, tonight, tonight, tonight, tonight
