Never good enough, never good enough
She's pleading for your love
Never good enough, never good enough
Kept her waiting, oh
Didn't want to be the one with arms to hold her
But she wanted to be the one who owns her now

But she's changed everything except her name
So you'll never find her
She may wear the same skin as yesterday
But this ain't the same girl, no,
This ain't the same girl

Never find another, no you'll never find another like me
You will never find a lover
Who'll ever want to love you for free
But as the pendulum swings she gets sleepier
And he whispers little things he wants her to believe

Like you'll never find another,
No, you'll never find another like me
You will never find a lover who will ever want to love you for free

But if you want to, you can leave
Tie this chain onto your sleeve
So when I want you, you'll come back to me
Oh, my darling, rightfully,
You're too afraid to run free
And even more afraid to run from me,

Now she's changed everything except her name
So you'll never find her
She may wear the same skin as yesterday
But this ain't the same girl, no,
This ain't the same girl

Never good enough, never good enough
She's pleading for your love
Never good enough, never good enough
Kept her waiting

Now this ain't the same girl,
No this ain't the same girl

Never good enough, never good enough
She's pleading for your love
Never good enough, never good enough,
He kept her pleading
No, this ain't the same girl
No, she ain't the same
