birds are bullets from flower guns and ships are anchors and planes are bombs when the war is over we are gone will our love live on and buildings burning and disintegrate and trees like armies redominate with the concrete cracking and silent streets
reveals the beauty beneath

when we leave

when summer rains go dead and drown and tanks are treasures beneath the ground when walls dividing are broken down will our souls be found and streetlight stars that coat the dawn and clouds stop crying their endless song when (????) can belong
will our love be gone?

and we deserve our fate yes it is too late
we deserve our fate
we deserve it

and birds are bullets from flower guns
when war is over and we are gone will our love live on?
