

Jaymay

"Corduroy"

Visit "Corduroy" on MotoLyrics.com

The train is so cold tonight
My fingers too numb to write
But I write to spite the cold
And moon I can see you there
You're still hanging in there
Though you are so very old

And I'm just thinking about a boy
Wearing wintergreen corduroy

You're waking me where I sleep
You're taking me where I keep on
Telling myself not to go
What am I supposed to do
All by myself without you
On a train moving so slow

I'm just thinking about a boy
Wearing wintergreen corduroy

On the train again moving away from you
On the train again moving away from you
On the train again I never wanted to leave

The sun has set in the west
The moon is doing her best
To light up the sky tonight
I look to the moon for you
Maybe you're looking too
It's really a lovely sight

And I'm just thinking about a boy
Wearing my wintergreen corduroy

On the train again moving away from you
On the train again moving away from you
On the train again I never intended to leave you

The train is so cold

