(Ira Louvin - Helen Carter)

I should have known you'd never changed that you were having fun
And in your chain of broken hearts I only counted one Those unkind things you'd say and do I doubt if you recall
I never did complain to you but I lost you after all.

Too much fate and promises made so carelessly
Proves that trusting heart can break from lovin'
recklessly
I loved you more than anything that love I can't recall
I even wore your wedding ring but I lost you after all.

--- Instrumental ---

Proves that trusting heart can break from lovin'
recklessly
I loved you more than anything that love I can't recall
I even wore your wedding ring but I lost you after all...
