Persephone

she descends down from the ceiling with magnolias in her hair she lights every single candle in a crystal chandelier with no more than a whisper she illuminates the room and I am bound here by her poison like a drunk in her saloon as the apparition
she frightens me to death as flesh and blood and woman she takes my every breath as persephone she's perfect god have mercy on my soul I am hollow I am helpless and I've lost all my control who am I that the world would miss hiding in her sweetest kiss dying in her careless crush the taste of salt on her summer blush I can smell vanilla rain falling soft on her fields again write my name in waters still and let me fade away

I can feel her eyes upon me but there's nothing I can do I am paralyzed in the silence of her beautiful remove and sometimes I get the feeling when I'm knocking at the door that with the devil I am dealing but I keep coming back for more
