"The Well"

We can make it, I know we can
Only time will tell
Let's take a walk down to the water
Let's go the well

You hear that low humming underground
Hear the skylark in the dell
The wild world is speaking
Let's go to the well

Sometimes my heart feels like a dandelion
Seeds scattered in a careless wind
And nothing to show for my life and time
But innocent wonder in the face of thunder
Feeling like something is about begin

Let's build a bonfire fr the stories we tell
Of wild years, the wasted tears
And he silent way they fell
See the curls of smoke rising up

To the big old sky as the moonlight falls
Down over those distant hiss
I don't want to be anywhere else anymore
Let's go to the well

You better believe my faith in you
It is wide and steady as a Texas moon
And when this stuff starts rolling through
It's as all innocent wonder in the face of thunder
Feeling like something is coming soon

We can make it, I know we can
Only time will tell
Let's take a walk down to the water
Let's go the well

And let's go down to those hills
Through the trees across the rocky path
Down to the Blanco river

Come with me darling, the sky is a so big today

My heart's so full
C'mon, let's go to the well now, babe
