I remember passing out at Adam's house that night
The day that I turned eighteen was the best day of my life
And Stu was there and (Greg) was there
They laughed at me while I drank another
Smoke a cigar,
It almost made me forget about the way things are
You and me were drifted apart
But it seems, now I'm eighteen, everything is fine

The next day when I woke up: hangover and shit
I looked over then we kissed
Then I knew that that was it, 'cause
Then I knew everything they said to me was true
When you weren't there for me, I still was there for you whoa
I remember everything and I couldn't live with everything you do

And I knew the way things are
You forced us to drift apart
But it seems, now I'm eighteen, everything is fine

Make me feel like, I meant something
That's the least you can do
Make me feel like, you felt something
I thought you knew I'd be true
Maybe one day in my
I won't think about that night
Maybe one day I might see you
And I won't even care
