Nothing left to share
But the burden of just another loss

with you nor with the ones
I used to love

I thought I had much to give
I thought I had much to say
I thought I had much to share

Yet the scaring secrets of my limpid heart brought me here and left me with

Nothing else to say
To the walls around me Nothing left to see
with these blind eyes Nothing left to do
but trusting the pain that flatters with the breath of grace

I thought I had much to say
But I've nothing else to share
And no one else to blame for the brittle ashes
of my pathetic starvation
