She's fixed in his mind like the picture
He's kept in his wallet for years
The image, it's never been tarnished
By the blood, sweat and tears
And after all of these years now

The moon is still over her shoulder
And the stars are still falling above
And she isn't one minute older
And he is still falling in love

Now sometimes, he finds it's amazing
That all of their children are wed
Their mother, she still turnin' eighteen
And turning his head
Yes, she still turns his head

When the moon is over her shoulder
And the stars are falling above
And she isn't one minute older
And he is still falling in love

And the moon is still over her shoulder
And the ribbon is still in her hair
And he, be still sees her dancing
And music just hangs in the air
