The glow of the streetlamps
And the fade of the sun
Said it was over before itâ'd begun
Before itâ'd begun
And the hum of an engine
Of a tired old machine
Blowing through the desert
Said lonely and mean
Said lonely and mean
And in the darkness whatâ'd we find?
What did we find?
Oh, there was so much time
Oh, there was so much time
Time in the city
And time at the sea
There was time for you
There was time for me
Time for you and me
And in the darkness I wouldnâ't mind
I would not mind
But oh, there was so much time
Oh, there was so much time
Oh, there was so much time
Oh, there was so much time
And in the darkness I wouldnâ't mind
I would not mind
But oh, there was so much time
Oh, there was so much time
Oh, there was so much time
Oh, there was so much time
