i broke the little cabana boy's heart to let you fondle me in the dark one of those seedy outdoor motels in your bed swore i never would tell i waited for the sun but it never came out now i'll never know what the fuss was about to watch it set over this mess that used to be a town you're the last one i thought i'd have my arms around sometimes at night our bodies collide and i forget who i'm laying next to i did not ask to be born with these eyes eyes that always speak for my mind i thought i would come home alone but i brought all your habits into my home sometimes at night our bodies collide and i froget who i'm laying next to laying next to
