Six o'clock in the morning
Wake up by the bed
There sits a new Japanese toy
And I like it

See the name on the wrapping
Can't read yet but I know
It's made for me, lucky boy
And I want it

Lights that flash, wheels that go round
Digital display
Fresh silicon chips to enjoy
And I need them

Where's the batteries? Where's the batteries?

Sitting silent and empty
Wish I could breathe life
In my friend who's terribly still
And I like him

Just like me, p'rhaps he's hungry
Six volts make him smile
And twelve volts would probably kill
How I like him

Daddy, where's the batteries
I can't find my batteries
Daddy, where's the batteries
[Incomprehensible]
I cannot find my batteries

Seven o'clock in the morning
They find me by the bed
With my friend the Japanese toy
I am with him

Mummy, Daddy can't see you
Hear you
Batteries not included in this little boy

Where's my batteries? Where's my batteries?
