There's a light in the house
In the wood in the valley
There's a thought in the head
Of the man

Who carries his dreams
Like the coat slung on his shoulder
Bringing you love
In the cap in his hand

And each step he takes
Is one half of a lifetime
No word he would say
Could you understand

So he bundles his regrets
Into a gesture of sorrow
Bringing you love
Cap in hand

Catching breath
As he looks through the dining-room window
Candle-lit table
For two has been laid

Strange slippers by the fire
Strange boots in the hall-way
Put my cap on my head
I turn, and walk away
