Just so happens that I'm tired of your face
Just so happens that I'm tired of this place Just so happens that I can not endure
The pain and the suffering that's caused when I touch you anymore

Just so happens that I'm tired of this song
'cause everything I ever tried to do just came out wrong
And every honest thing I ever tried to do Was turned to pain and misery when laid before the godly feet of you

[chorus]
There's no words left to say
'cause all the words between us have already gone away

It just so happens that my flesh is turning pale And pieces of me are disappearing as though my hands were whales
And it just so happens beauty, you could never recognize
And I simply faded away, before your eyes

Just so happens that these last two years
Been a completely meaningless waste of my tears
And if I had a toothpick for every vow you made

I'd build a boat of your promises, and I'd sail away

Just so happens it'd take a swift kick to the heart
To make you take back everything that you said Just so happens that we stuck around too long
We should have abandoned ship, rather than go down with it, now it's Gone

Just so happens that I hate your mother-in-law And I hate your dog, henry, I'd like to fondle him with a

Just so happens that I'm walking out the door
And p.s., and by the way, I don't love you anymore

'cause all the words between us have already gone,
They've already gone
They've already gone away
