The rain kept on falling and darkened the sky the dawn was to come with the sunrise Revealing the shadows that passed through the mist, the torch light was flickering the storm was chasing them on A procession of dark coats followed the star foretold to come since ages In silence they walked on crossing their lands on the way to Bethlehem to break the chains of the spell
Stone, they worshipped the stone in generation from father to son
A star, a star is to come to light the way to the one who is born
The leader he knelt there to greet the new born holding his pendant before him tear drops were falling from his eyes as he said
"Take the stone and use it well don't do as I did long ago"
Went into the sundown, never returned The moon was rising and the heaven burned Like shadows disappeared the men and the black stone weilders were never seen again Stone, they weilded the stone
in generation from father to son
to light the way to the one who is born Black stone weilder is born They came across the western sea with powers greater than needed The wizards commanded the lightning every creature knelt before their will But they weilded the black stone with evil and their evil was cast back on them Damned to praise God forever till His son was born to deliver Stone, they weilded the stone
in generation from father to son
to light the way to the one who is born
