

Jim Gaven

"Lament's Charade...A Confession of Sorts"

Visit "Lament's Charade...A Confession of Sorts" on MotoLyrics.com

1st Verse: To you it may concern, I speak on behalf of man, now its our turn, to win this ongoing battle of words, so argue away, cause arguments say that you can't handle

Chorus: The truth is that lies became such a big part of you, and I can't break, the code that your shell covers oh so smooth, it's only you (2nd Chorus add-on: But telling the truth is a game that you're willing to lose, and I can not make you become the only exception to your own rule

2nd Verse: Who's adding insult to injury, you should have seen, the look on your face, such a sweet but sour embrace, that yearns for my love, and the lack thereof, so if embarrassing you is this easy, I'll retrace my steps

Ending: So disguising will help as a ghost of yourself, yet it haunts you tonight, and every time you look in the sky while the stars shine their light and the hopes of your bright future come to an end, now you can see through the cut out(s) of me, that the shadows and silhouettes, mean nothing in respect to the time that you lost, are you sorry at all, for the heartbreaks you caused, or the problems you left unsolved, has it come down to this? Your life's charade smashed regrets with a fist

Visit Jim Gaven page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.