Words and music: jim johnston

I wrote a letter I can't send, cause I wasn't ready for this love to end. certain that some things were meant to be. I was living in a fairy tale, a sunset destination, happy trails, with an unexpected turn I didn't see. well nothing changes by itself, when you took our love down from it's dusty shelf you never even said goodbye to me.

I keep searching for the words but they wont come, and satisfy my tongue, now I can't trust anyone, no one understands me.

Through solitary's long sad day, I can say I've changed in many ways, I wonder how it'd be if you were here. I step back into my fantasy, where there's still such a thing as destiny wishing someone would just say goodbye for me.

satisfy my tongue, now I can't trust anyone, no one understands me. I keep thinking that this love was meant to last, and not what's buried in my past, until I break the spell you cast, I'm just trying to get free.

I wrote this letter I can't send, I wasn't ready for this love to end, will someone please just say goodbye for me?

I keep searching for the words but they won't come, and satisfy my tongue, for all the things we left undone, I don't understand me. I keep thinking that this love was meant to last, and not like what's buried in my past until I break the spell you cast, I'm just trying to get free. I can't seem to stop myself from wondering why you can't taste these tears I've cried, but what to do I can't decide, so I'm just trying to break free.
