Jim Morrison & The Doors "Black Polished Chrome"

The music was new, black polished chrome And came over the summer like liquid night. The DJ's took pills to stay awake And play for seven days.

They went to the studio
And someone knew him.
Someone knew the TV showman.
He came to our homeroom party
And played records and when he left
In the hot noon sun
And walked to his car,
We saw the Chooks had written
F-U-C-K on his windshield.
He wiped it off with a white rag
And smiling cooly drove away.

He's rich. Got a big car.
