Jimmy Lafave, from "Highway trance"

I went driving, on the northern plains
I went rolling through the fields of grain I thought about you, can't live without you, no matter how I try There's something sacred the way the tears fall from your eyes

I went flying, in a big jet plane
Across the ocean, just to know your name Island princess, it's my heart's concern, I should've never said goodbye There's something sacred when the tears fall from
your eyes
Let 'em fall, let 'em fall on me
Let 'em fall, let 'em set me free

I went dreaming, and I saw your face And in that moment, I was touched by grace And all alone now, I hear the wolves howl, and it makes me wonder why
There's something sacred when the tears fall from
your eyes

It's always sacred, the way the tears fall from your eyes
There's something sacred the way the tears fall from
your eyes
